Review

'This is a splendid book in every way . . . Every law school in the English-speaking world should have at least two copies or, preferably, since there are usually four mooters to a moot, four copies. They will quickly become well thumbed.' Lord Slynn of Hadley

'Whether read from cover to cover or used as a work of reference, this book will be indispensable for those coming new to mooting.' The Law Teacher

'This book's overriding goal is "to be the student's guide" to mooting, but its reach should be far wider to encompass and encourage all tutors of law to incorporate mooting into their law school's curriculum.' Rebecca Huxley-Binns, Nottingham Trent University, The Law Teacher, April 2005

'The authors ask 101 questions about mooting, providing the answers to each question in a clear and understandable prose. The novice mooter can, therefore, become very knowledgeable about this game we call a moot by reading the book from cover to cover. The more experienced mooter (or tutor) can use the book as a valuable reference guide, and the very detailed contents and index pages should facilitate swift and efficient discovery of the issue to be resolved.' Rebecca Huxley-Binns, Nottingham Trent University, The Law Teacher, April 2005
